Magnifier is a powerful utility designed to magnify and enlarge the area displayed on a specified window, especially useful to increase the size of a displayed text. Magnify is a small utility that allows you to magnify text in a window, using any combination of the control keys. When you do this, it is quite useless, since the window is already huge. However, if you assign Magnify to the hotkey of your printer, nothing will stop you from just printing your documents by pressing that hotkey. Magnify is an application that allows you to magnify any area of your window, using any combinations of the control keys. The goal of the application is to magnify (enlarge) the area displayed on a given window, using any combination of the control keys. Magnify does not move the text on the window, but it can magnify (enlarge) the text. No feature is not available. You can magnify text in any window on your desktop or notebook, choose the area to be magnified and the zoom factor (percentage). Magnify allows you to magnify any area of your window, using any combination of the control keys. This utility is recommended for anyone who uses their printer in the office, since it is very easy to print a document using the magnify function. The output will be saved to a text file, so all you need is a text editor, as Notepad for example. There is a utility included with this package that allows you to print, save and send this kind of file to someone by email. To print the file, you just have to select "Print" from the File menu. In order to save the file to the printer, simply select "Print to File" and a couple of minutes later your file will be ready to print. Printer Print/Save. When running Magnify for a few days, you'll notice a couple of things. 1) Whenever you zoom, the scale is doubled, more or less. No modification of the original size. 2) The cursor does not follow the zoom, and it is not usually a shortcut to the next window. 3) You can also zoom in the opposite direction. Very handy.
