I'm using custom loading script for my project that based on this article. It works fine for my local development environment. But when I deployed on my client it is not working. I did an include of NProgress.js but I am still getting error on var progressBar = $(".progress-bar"); for some reason. Error is: Cannot read property 'divisor' of undefined Here is my code. (function () { var progressBar; var customEvents = { 'change': 1, 'totalComplete': 2, 'firstByteComplete': 3 }; var myTimer = null; function interval() { if (!progressBar) { progressBar = $(".").insertBefore("#body"); } NProgress.start(); var total = document.getElementById('myDiv').innerHTML; var completed = document.getElementById('myDiv2').innerHTML; NProgress.done(function (event, bar, percent, duration) { customEvents[event] = customEvents[event] || 0; customEvents[event]++; NProgress.label(customEvents[event], percent + '%' + (custom

There are talks of them coming out with new models, but i don't know if that includes 3xu. +1 You can't buy the 3xu. It is a very unique computer, there are only three of them in the world. It was developed in the 70s by Carl Zeiss, they are no longer making it in its full form, and they don't have one for sale. Can you buy idecon 3xu? My buddy has one of these nifty machines (although the desktop version...not the lcd!) My question is if you can actually buy one? I am pretty sure the answer is no...yet i'm curious to see if there's any actual evidence to back me up. Can you buy idecon 3xu? This machine is amazing! It is an extremely unique machine with crazy specs. It is 50x52x20mm and all of it is made of plastic. The colorman is a shade of green that I cannot describe... and there are "sunrays" that appear in the holes when you turn the light on. Don't get me wrong, it is a great machine... and if your looking for one of these... go for it! Can you buy idecon 3xu? Hi, in the beginning, the lcd model was sold for $2000+ and this kinda confused me because other than its "goofy" appearance, it's specifications (like the gfx chip itself) is actually quite impressive. I believe that if you bought one and operated it as a budget speaker with bluetooth and at least a 2.1 f30f4ceada
