I have a vps at 1and1.com for 1 year and i paid for it and i wanna change it, so i requested a new vps from them but now the system says i can't do that. So i thought about getting a regular vps somewhere else, but i need a email server. I'm a total noob to linux but i've been reading for a while and this was the best solution for me, i've got the website i'm working on up and running and i'm looking for some further advice. The reasons i'm looking for an email server is the fact that i have another vps for my zoneminder camera and sometimes i don't have a good internet connection so when i do, i lose my contacts in thunderbird and i need to redo everything again. So in case i have a vps at my home so i can always check my email and i can set it up so my main account at 1and1.com can send me a mail if i miss one when i'm not at home or when i have a slow connection. Is there any way i can do that? Or should i just switch to linux and forget about the vps solution? I don't want to be messing around with something complicated i'm not good at. Finally i've found
