define('WP_STATIC_URL', ");
define('WP_CACHE', false);
define('WP_CACHE_MYSQL', false); A:
You could check if the password is correct with a redirect after the rewrite.
