What's new in Big Money! Deluxe:

The highlight of the waiting area at the front of the shop is a collection of old boxes with a rack of CDs strung from the ceiling. They've all been practically untouched since 2006, when UpWords first opened and continue to serve as nostalgic inspiration. It's where we pick which CDs to play and for all intents and purposes it's our station of authority. I can assure you, we'll never let you down. Whether you're an avid collector or you're just a casual fan, we have something for you, no matter how hard or wide-spread your in-home listening is. There was a brief time, before this shop opened, when CDs were worth their weight in gold. I'm not just talking about anything. Let's take my friend BKD's dream, White Stripes record The White Stripes. It has all but sold out as I type. It's a rare, insane rarity item that's almost hard to believe that it's not being sold somewhere else. If you can buy a $120 black vinyl version of Fleetwood Mac's Rumours, the album originally released for $10 back in the 80s, chances are you'll still find something of value in either of the two formats of The White Stripes (there are still countries in which this, the third White Stripes record, is yet again, unavailable in both) Record Collection. Rarer still is the record's companion piece, a tape that holds the track listing and detailed instructions on how to order the record online (an option I recently picked up for less than $5). Only a dozen of these were made and it's considered a permanent piece of the record collecting lore. Does anyone know how I can still get mine? Anyone? Or how about a regular copy of Fleetwood Mac's Rumours? I know I will never get another, so I was kind of bummed that my 20th copy I own turned out to be almost £2 by the time it's my turn again. Uhhh....that's just wrong. These are just a couple of examples of why I love this community. It's almost impossible to find a store that has what you're looking for, no one will ever let you down, and you will never find a better friend. Oh and one more thing... Our favourite stereo! Like most others, we play nothing but old school rock. Here's what's in that centre rack, Amazon wishlist after the jump
