"We are extremely excited about what this technology can bring to the gameplay. With 'HyperMotion Technology,' we are giving players an unprecedented level of fidelity and accuracy for all types of actions," says Alistair Paterson, Director of FIFA. "New features like Head On tackles or a gliding ball forehand for volleys will give players a deeper level of control when they are on the ball and will re-enforce the controlled, cerebral, fluid action of the game." The next generation of FIFA boasts a host of improvements based on technology advancements, including a refined pitch environment that features unique player-to-pitch interaction and an increased number of players per team (13 on the pitch), which allows more players to play in each game. "This year we are delivering a FIFA that goes beyond anything players have experienced before," said Robbie Rogers, Executive Producer at EA SPORTS. "We want to introduce players to FIFA with a game that delivers a true, authentic and exciting football experience. This year, FIFA continues to be a platform that changes the way football is played and experienced. With developments that improve on and for the gameplay, new features inspired by real-life moments on the pitch and an intriguing narrative, we are delivering FIFA that has never been seen before in a football game." FIFA 22 includes a wide range of changes to gameplay, including: Player Trajectories - The new player camera option, which is now available in all modes, allows the player to lock onto an opponent using new trajectory in a game. The path of the ball, the direction of the shot and passes can be tracked in real-time. Player Trajectory - The new player camera option, which is now available in all modes, allows the player to lock onto an opponent using new trajectory in a game. The path of the ball, the direction of the shot and passes can be tracked in real-time. Refereeing - New on-pitch voice commands are now available in all game modes. For example, by saying "," the referee can instantly sprint down the field. Or, by saying "," the referee can instantly blow the whistle. Additionally, referee animations are simplified and more reactive, creating more variety and intensity for referees throughout the match. - New on-pitch voice commands are now available in all game modes.
