“HyperMotion is an evolution of Real Player Motion”, said Andy Serkis, Chief Creative Officer at EA SPORTS. “What we have found is that when you capture the actual behaviours of players, the movements are the same, the tackles are the same, the stamina levels of the players are the same, the effort levels are the same, the DNA is the same. That’s why we’re able to have every game feel different, every game feel fun and every game feel authentic. It’s never about mechanics – it’s about player behaviours.” “RPM is the backbone of the greatest sports video games ever made, so the opportunity to really put our science, our technology and our game design to the ultimate test and the best players we could find in the world to get it right is a dream come true for us,” said Andrew Wilson, senior producer on FIFA. “Our goal here at EA SPORTS has always been to give fans an experience that is completely unique, and we’ve come a long way to achieving this. FIFA fans have been waiting for the next generation of player motions and they will be blown away by the results.” Pro Goals This is not just a visual update, but a fundamental change to the physics and rules of the game. HyperMotion Technology alters the rules of the game to create a player on player collision, meaning that contact with an opponent can now lead to the player receiving a card rather than avoiding it. In addition, ball control and passing animations have been reworked to enhance accuracy, and tackling animations have been enhanced to reflect the momentum carried by the player and the ball. Improved gameplay: Better ball vision and control Improved player animations Enhanced ball movement: Dynamic speed, spin, and behavior Improved physics: Get closer to the action New goal: More realistic, driven by user input Exclusive Features: In-Game Augmented Reality (AR): Experience FIFA more like you are the real player and your movements in the game are mapped directly to the real-life player. For example, AR on the pitch will read out player and ball information, such as how many touches, shots on target, and tackles the player makes. Teams with a player on the pitch will also be represented in the correct pre

These values can be repeated, which means the same customer can be represented more than once. The objective is to be able to write a query that can look at the full table, and then bring back a list of the customer IDs that are present as well as the number of records that each have - i.e. customerId | customerValue | numberOFRecords ----- 1 | 1 | 12 2 | 2 | 13 3 | 1 | 1 4 | 4 | 2 5 | 6 | 3 Because the customerValues are unique across the full table, the customer id should be unique between any row with the same customerValue. I have tried the following: CREATE TABLE new (customerId INT, customerValue INT, numberOFRecords INT); INSERT INTO new (customerId, customerValue, numberOFRecords) SELECT DISTINCT customerId, customerValue, numberOFRecords FROM old; bc9d6d6daa

EA SPORTS FIFA is a football-only video game developed by EA Canada. It features 3D images, realistic animations and fully licensed player names and numbers. Players can experience all 22 of the world’s most popular football teams. What is the EA SPORTS FIFA Ultimate Team™ mode? FIFA ULTIMATE TEAM is your digital excuse to play out your fantasy football dream team! With the new Seasons feature, your fantasy team will compete against other players’ teams, or you can take on your friends in offline team battles. Additional improvements also include a new pack purchasing feature that makes it easier to manage your collection and tweak your strategies. What is the Seasons feature? Seasons is the way you save time in FIFA. It is a brand new way to manage your players. This new feature allows you to save time from the beginning of the season right up to the end. Remember your draft and have all the information you need at your fingertips. What is the New Player Motion Intelligence feature? FIFA is the world's only sports title that delivers human-like player animation. Now, we’re extending that technology so you can see and feel the nuances of player movement and control in unprecedented ways. This makes each player more visible on the field. How did you test the game's new player motion intelligence? We filmed some of the top players in the world doing the exact same plays, then measured and compared the differences in real-time to see where we fell short. The resulting data was so accurate we needed to change the gameplay to a level we had never seen before! What does the new physics engine mean for gameplay? With the new physics engine, which is the heart of our basketball and other sports engines, we let the player feel movement and energy in a whole new way. We’ve been asked more than anyone else to do what we’ve done, and we have done it. The new engine is the core of the physics and controls in FIFA. As physics move to the core of our sports, the game will become even more real. What is the new melee animation and player intelligence? As we move our new physics engine into more sports, FIFA has become the world’s only sports title to deliver real, accurate, and believable character animation. It is the result of our partnership with Blizzard Entertainment to learn from their work and take it a
