Jedediah Smith Peak (Jedediah in his younger days, of course. Will be known as Jedediah Smith in his old age, since the naming conventions of Native Americans aren't so great, and he wants to get in on the media rights...) is a long, steep hike, up and down. It's also a pretty flat hike - only 400+ vertical feet of elevation change in the entire hike...so it's doable, if you don't mind working hard. We happened to be walking during a week that was especially perfect, and it's actually a bit chilly up there at this time of year. If you're planning to go hike Jedediah, be sure to pack your walking shoes, since it is also a common hiking practice to hike it in the first place. And, when going to do this hike, you'll want to make sure you have food and water for the entire hike, as there are no services of any sort. (There's a pretty good plan provided by the North Georgia Mountain Conservancy, however, if you want to stay overnight on the peak.) As with most hikes, make sure you get plenty of sleep the night before, and have a plan for safety should you need to use your vehicle. It may seem like a simple hike, but it is not! (And, with the added bonus of a beautiful sunrise on the peak too!) With that being said, let's go ahead and get started! The way up is really quite long, so we began hiking at about 10:00am in the Caral Club parking lot. It's only a 20 minute drive from the clubhouse to the trailhead, so be sure to allow yourself plenty of time. It's a relatively early start to the hike, though most folks start as early as possible, since the trail gets crowded as you approach the peak. Take in the views of the vistas, as you hike. After e79caf774b
