The films of the xXx series starred Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez as Xander Cage and Carmen "Fang" Trejo, respectively. The third film of the series, xXx: Return of Xander Cage, is set two years after the events of the second film. It follows Cage as he is tracked down by Xiang, who is seeking revenge for the events of the previous two films. After escaping, Xander must work with an anti-crime task force created by his father, Senator Robert Cage. The films of the xXx series were funded by Millennium Films and reflected the motion-capture technology of the late 1990s. For example, Return of Xander Cage was the first film to be photographed using 3D motion capture, and xXx: The Return of Xander Cage was the first film to be filmed entirely using motion-capture technology. We're talking about the Death Notice cast, in the next week or two, a couple of Xander Cage cast members, and a couple of other things about the Death Notice movie, and we're going to try to keep that quiet, so you don't let it out. The story of the movie is the final chapter of the third film of the series, in which our Xander is finally killed off. According to the Wikipedia page, the character Vincent in xXx: Return of Xander Cage is one of the few surviving characters from the previous two movies. So, it is important for him to bring his friends back to life. Finally, it is officially said that all the three movies, including the ones that are yet to come, are to be played by the Vin Diesel. However, the goal of this series is not to go as far as to kill off Vin and leave just the Terminator. The point of the series is to let the action take its course and the human body might be destroyed but not the hero.
