Can you create reviews within Photoshops but open reviews within Photoshop at the same time. This will help users that have several features on screen at once avoid having to re-open Photoshop every time they want to review comments. Or even revisit comments. Great tip guys, I am trying to improve a couple of my productions and guess what I have a ton of great reviewers on all of my PSDs. You guys are awesome. Can't wait to roll out the new review tool. Thanks for listening to the community. Well, you can do it yourself with sharing your project with others. If you want to share everything, simply do so and then share your document with others. This will then make any comments public so that everyone can see. If you want to keep this private, simply do so and no one can see. Another option is to have another person review your work directly if you know that person. Last, you can have Adobe review certain aspects of your work. See the list of features below. Adobe's existing team review features are varying in their usefulness, but some are better than the others. Because Photoshops is so simple and easy to use, you can quickly and easily create a review for your work. Or you can simply email it to a reviewer. If you just want a quick fix for something, this may be enough. Otherwise, you have alternatives. Adobe has method for reviewing your document and commenting on issues with it. Your reviewers can comment on specific issues, on the entire product, or on portions of it. Comments are edited in real-time while you continue to work, and they stay in the product (and synced) until you approve or disagree with them. You can add notes and edit the comments, which help reviewers keep their comments concise. This helps avoid lengthy and, well, annoying comments. You can also reply directly to the reviewer and address issues in real-time.
